BILLS BEFORE THE MAYOR.

Parttean Legislation and the Ninth Avenue Midnight Train Bill Approved.

Stevenson Constable, Superintendent of Buildings, with his counsel, Gen. Thomas Ewing, appeared at the hearing before the Mayor yesterday on the bill providing that hereafter the construction of buildings on the piers shall be under the control of the Dock Department, instead of the Building Department. They said that the bill had been passed in the interest of steamship men, who thought they could put up cheaper structures if they were not controlled by the building laws. The Fire Department, the Board of Fire Underwriters, and Good Government Club F were also represented in opposition. Dimock, who drew the bill, spoke in favor of it. The Mayor took it under advisement.

The bill permitting the Dock Commissioners to employ workmen for all submarine work was also before the Mayor yesterday. He also approved the bills authorizing the Board of City Record to take city advertising away from Democratic newspapers and give it to Republican papers; compelling the Ninth avenue elevated road to run trains until midnight at intervals of twelve minutes; continuing the corpovale of twelve minutes; continuing the corporate existence of the trustees of the Exempt Firemen's Benevolent Fund for twenty years, He disapproved the bill for a bridge over the Mott Haven Canal at 138th street.

In the afternoon he had a talk with the Mayor.

DECREES ISSUED AT A COST OF $11 10 EACH LITIGANT.

The "Mayor of Brownsville" Is One of the "Indges," and a Law Student Is the Other-Justice Harriman's Investigation Brings to Light au Odd State of Affairs,

When Justice Harriman of the Gates Avenue Police Court, in Brooklyn, recently discovered that a case before him, in which two Hebrew residents of Brownsville were involved, had been adjudicated by a private judicial tribunal in the district, he started an investigation. This resulted in the discovery that no fewer than twenty-six cases, in which twenty-one persons were interested either as plaintiffs or defendants, were so disposed of without his cooperation during the last three weeks. He had all these persons before him yesterday. Their names and addresses are:

Louis Platt of 380 Rockaway avenue; Mabey Baeder, 384 Rockaway avenue; Jacob Baeder, same address; Cassell Raeder, Osborne street and Liberty avenue; Lizzie Cohn, Watkins street, near Sutter avenue; Charles Raeder, 386 Rockaway avenue; Gerschen Unger, Osborne street, near Eastern Parkway; Samuel Ames, 29 Sutter avenue; Gerschen Unger, Osborne street, near Eastern Parkway; Samuel Ames, 29 Sutter avenue; Frank Singer, Thatford street and Sutter avenue; Jacob Foland, Watkins street, near Sutter avenue; Edward Horchild, Liberty avenue near Crescent; Andrew Zieber, 408 Watkins street; Ellen Hennessy, Liberty avenue, near Crescent; Abraham Levy, 425 Watkins street; Rachel Heimes, Thatford street, near Dumont; Maria Hundreshak, same address; Alex Goldberg, Osborne street, near Blake avenue; Esther Morse, Thatford street, near Dumont; Molly Goldberg, Osborne street, near Blake avenue, and Bessie Levy, same address.

When the party was ranged in front of the bar, Justice Harriman demanded by what authority they had so contemptuously disregarded his jurisdiction in the various cases. All of them showed copies of mutual agreements in which they promised not to press the charges.

Alex Goldberg explained that Barney Wolf, popularly known as the "Mayor of Brownsville," had sent for him and directed him to withdraw a charge of larceny he had made against Esther Moore. He went with the woman to Wolfs office, and, after listening to both sides, Wolf ordered them to sign an agreement to drop the litigation, and then charged ench $1 for his services.

"Wolf," Goldberg continued, "is a notary public, counsellor-at-law, and has jurisdiction in all cases between Brownsville Hebrows."

On further inquiry, Justice Harriman learned that, owing to the rush of business, a second private court was recently organized in Brownsville by Her were interested either as plaintiffs or defendants, were so disposed of without his coopera. tion during the last three weeks. He had all

MORE CUBANS RISING.

Belief Here that the Reports of the Deaths of Marti and Comez are False.

A despatch was received at the Cuban revolutionary headquarters to-day direct from Cienfuegos. It said that several isolated bands of Cubans bad risen at Las Villas, in the province of Santa Clara. These bands aggregate 3,000 men at the lowest reckoning. Each band is composed of about 100 men, and they expect to be able to unite soon. The despatch also says that a few days ago, in the same district, a skirmish took place between a small body of insurgents, under the ex-bandit Matagas, and twenty-five Spanish soldiers. The Spaniards were drawn into an ambush, nineteen of them were killed, and the rest only escaped through having fast horses. The fugitives left their arms on the field.

The fact that Gomez also is reported as killed strengthens the belief of the Cubans here that the story of Marti's death is a Spanish fabrication. They hold that the story is part of a prearranged scheme for raising money and discouraging the other Cubans from rising.

The Spanish knew, they say, that there were many bands ready to join Marti and Gomez on their advance. The only way to stop this was to report the death of the leaders and the failure of their plans. The scheme, they say, was cleverly arranged. First an order was issued forbidding correspondents to communicate with the rebels. Next Marti was reported killed, then Gomez. To-morrow, they say, we will hear that Macco has committed suicide for the third or fourth time. Matagas, and twenty-five Spanish soldiers. The

WORTH AS POCICE REORGANIZER. He Turns the Democratic Policemen Out

Lewis R. Worth, a brother of ex-Senator Jacob Worth, was formerly a Captain in the regular police force in Brooklyn, but he retired a few years ago on a pension. Now he has been appointed Police Commissioner by Supervisor Ryder for the town of Flatlands. He is a Republican, and his first act yesterday was to reorganize the force on purely partisan lines. He removed Capt. Hendricksen and appointed expusitive James Remsen in his place, and he substituted Laurence Hassier for Sergeant Kraft. The twenty-two old Democratic patrolinen were turned adrift, and Republicans have their places. Sergeant Tice is the only member of the old force retained. The Legislature wiped out the old four-headed Commission and provided for a single Commissioner, to be appointed by Sapervisor Ryder.

Flatiands will become a part of Brooklyn on Jan. 1 next, and will be known as the Thirty-second ward. The police will be organized as a regular precinct force, and it is expected that Capt. Hemsen will be left in command. organize the force on purely partisan lines. Tie

After Mr. Whitnall was excused there ensued a lengthy argument between the Court, Assistant District Attorney Weeks, and Col. James as to the swearing of the jurors. It was finally settled by Justice Barrett ordering that David P. Miller, hatter, of 548 Broadway and John H. Ruckle, broker, of 18 East 137th street be sworn. The jurors then moved up, leaving the twelfth seat vacant.

When the jury was complete, before Mr. Whitnall was excused, Col. James objected to all further proceedings, arguing that the stay granted by Justice Pratt on the motion for a change of venue on June 3 still held good and Justice Ingraham was without jurisdiction. Col. James objected to continuing the trial until the motion for a change of venue was argued. Justice Barrett overruled the motion, and an exception by the defence was put on the record. John C. Weaver, a contractor, of 1,687 Washington avenue, was secured as a juror at last night's session, and he occupies the eleventh seat. William P. Parr, a flour merchant, of 4 State street, was the other juror who took the tenth seat yesterday. DRY GOODS CHRONICLE QUARREL President De Berard Deposed and an In-

There is a business quarrel in the office of the Dry Goods Chronicle, a journal devoted to the interests of the dry goods trade, with offices at 54 Franklin street, which began between the editor, F. B. De Berard, and the publisher, Charles Clucas. On Thursday, at a meeting of the Board of Directors, Mr. De Berard, who was President of the company as well as the editor of the paper, was deposed. Just afterward an officer from Judge Ingraham's court served an officer from Judge Ingraham's court served an injunction upon the directors, restraining them from such an action. The injunction is returnable on Wednesday.

Mr. Clucas avers that Mr. De Berard has, with an intent to injune the Chronicle, allied himself with a rival publication, the Dry Goods Economics, still trying to hold, nevertheless, the office of President of the Chronicle Company.

Of the nine directors of the company these six were present at the meeting: John A. Tweedy, F. B. Thurber, D. T. Hible, C. G. Hulphers, Charles Clucas, and Mr. De Berard. The absentees were John M. Beach, J. Howard Sweetser, and H. K. Thurbur.

Mr. De Berard, when seen at the office of the Economist, 78 Walker street, produced a type-written statement of his side of the case. This statement is that he wishes either to buy Mr. Clucas's interest in the Chronicle or sell his own, and that Mr. Clucas is not agreeable to either proposition.

Bourke borrowed $100 from McNally to buy green goods, the proceeds to be shared equally between them. The amount to be shared equally between them. The amount was sent to New York, and in due time they received by express two boxes containing bath bricks from their New York correspondent, McNally, feeling the loss of his $100 very bitterly, asked Bourke to refund, and the latter refused; hence the suit.
